

Frost on Sunday Night.
Quite a heavy frost visited this section on Sunday night, and those people who left their tomatoes and potatoes out of doors on that occasion have reason to regret their carelessness. In some places water froze to the thickness of a pane of glass, and where this occurred everything of a tender nature was destroyed. As at 7 o'clock, and it is expected that whether frost suffered to any great extent or not cannot be told at this time, but the chances are that the crop was cut down very materially.

Will Celebrate Anniversary.
The Mystic Workers will celebrate the 15th anniversary of the organization of their lodge in this city on Monday and Tuesday, May 24th and 25th. On Monday, the 24th, there will be an initiation of new members to the thickness of a pane of glass, and where this occurred everything of a tender nature was destroyed. As at 7 o'clock, and it is expected that whether frost suffered to any great extent or not cannot be told at this time, but the chances are that the crop was cut down very materially.

GRAND ARMY BOYS COMPLETE THE WORK

Arrangements have been about completed for the observance of Memorial day in this city and it promises to be on a much larger scale than in previous years.

On Sunday, May 30, the G. A. R. post, the W. A. R. and the Sons of Veterans will march to St. Peter & Paul Catholic Church where Rev. Fr. Koeing will deliver the memorial sermon. These organizations will meet at the post hall on Oak Street at 9 o'clock sharp and the services will commence at ten.

On the afternoon of the 30th these three organizations will go to Nekeons on a special car where they will decorate the grave of Albert Abrams, a former member of the local post. The members will meet at the post hall at 1:30 o'clock, (those residing on the west side can meet at Nash's corner at the end of the car line). The car will leave at 2 o'clock. Commander Gels of the local post, G. A. R., extends an invitation to all local civic and patriotic organizations and the school children of this city to participate in the procession on Monday the 31st.

The funeral services at the cemetery in the forenoon will be held over the grave of Capt. Colby, who is buried in the Catholic cemetery. It has been the custom of the post to hold these services over the grave of the last member who died preceding Memorial day.

In the afternoon of May 31st memorial services will be held at the opera house. There will be a program rendered consisting of songs and recitations of a patriotic nature, and a memorial address delivered by the Hon. Geo. L. Williams of this city.

The commander earnestly requests that all business houses close from 9 in the forenoon until 4 in the afternoon. They want this one day of the year, given over wholly to the dead.

The arrangements are in the hands of committees from the W. A. R. and the Sons of Veterans with Commander Gels of the local post, and a complete Memorial program will be published later.

An absorbing Picture-Story of Human History.

The greatest photo-play ever produced is "Creation." Its "plot" covers not less than a period of 45,000 years. Its preparation has been one of money and time, and its execution is a masterpiece of art. It is the offspring of 50 years of studios research; it is conducted as a philanthropy pure and simple by its promoters, the International Bible Students Association, and both in this country and abroad has received the most enthusiastic praise.

The entire production requires eight hours for its presentation and is divided into the ten-hour play, "Creation," and the ten-hour play, "The Story of the World's History." The management of Dally's Theatre has secured "Creation" and will present it May 22-24-25-26—Saturday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, the four sections being shown in order, a day for each part.

The spectacle starts with the Bible record of the beginning of things, tracing the history of the earth from the beginning of time to the present, and then through the various steps in its preparation for human habitation mentioned as "days" or epochs of creation; and following these presents graphic descriptions of the principal events of the Bible.

Thrilling indeed are some of the events narrated. The historical account of the great Deluge in the days of Noah is presented in a remarkable manner. There on the seven mountains and his sons construct the huge vessel. Their neighbors come to jeer and ridicule the faith in God's word which impels them to build the immense boat on perfectly dry land, before a drop of water has fallen upon the earth. The patriarch steps his work to reason and warn his deriders. Finally the great ship is completed. Noah and his sons assemble the animals and lead them two by two into the ark. Zoological collections have been used to produce this part of the spectacle. Then the men of God and their families enter the great ship and the door is shut amid the gins and sneers of the scoffing heathen who rush at the ark and pound upon its doors to vent their scorn and derision. Suddenly the foretold storm arises. The rain falls in torrents and the people flee in terror. The waters rise, gradually covering the land and the people are drowned. The people now rush to the ark for safety and vainly endeavor to cling to its sides as the big boat is borne up on the flood, but unable to gain a footing are swept away.

The Israelites' Passover is pictured; the plague upon Egyptians is shown, followed by Pharaoh's release of the Touching stories of oriental home-life Hebrews and their departure, driving their flocks and herds before them, are told giving a view of Eastern peoples and customs, only possible to those who have traveled among them. The life story of Christ is portrayed in a most absorbing manner, and the Church by the Roman Emperors; and thence the story proceeds even to our own day with its marvelous progress and inventions, and portrays the wonderful Bible prophecies respecting the future.

PLAY WAS WELL RECEIVED

The Grand Old Flag, produced at Dally's Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday evenings, under the management of the Grand Old Flag Club, was greeted by large houses on both evenings, and the audiences were well pleased with the manner in which the young people handled their parts. The play was put on under the direction of Co. Hunt, who is an old hand at the show business, and the manner in which he got the young people lined up in the short time at his disposal, was certainly worthy of more than passing mention. The ladies cleared a nice little sum of money by the affair, which was one of the objects in giving it.

TO CALIFORNIA OVER THE "TRAIL OF THE OLYMPIAN"

Scenery and Service all the Way. —This year offers the greatest travel opportunity for the American tourist ever had. Unusually low fares West make it possible for one to travel farther and see more wonderful sights than ever before for the same money.

In planning your western trip, therefore, you can but try to see as much of the wonders of the Great West as possible for a moderate outlay.

The North Coast route of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway affords scenery in greater volume than via any other route. This is because it pierces thru the heart of three great mountain ranges—the Mighty Rockies, the Forested Blue Mountains, and the snow-capped Cascades. Gigantic feats of engineering have been necessary to do this, and the result is truly delightful.

This route is called "The Trail of the Olympian" because one of the regular trains of the world-famous OLYMPIAN is operated over it. This is an all-steel train, company-owned and manned by company employees. A journey on "THE OLYMPIAN" is indeed an event, the charm of which you will always remember, unchanging service almost constantly changing scenes.

From Seattle and Tacoma you journey south to California over the picturesque "Palmer-Sheridan" route. After visiting the great cities, you can return home direct from either Los Angeles or San Francisco, without change of cars, on the steel-equipped "PACIFIC LIMITED."

Stop-overs are available wherever desired, and side trips can be made through Yellowstone Park, Rainer National Park and in Colorado.

For time of trains, fares, illustrated literature and other information, apply to Local Ticket Agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway.

OLE PLANNED A LARGE HOUSE.
What the Rochester, Minn., Daily Post says of OLE the SWEDISH DETECTIVE.

—OLE the SWEDISH DETECTIVE made one renowned hit at the Metropolitan Theatre Friday night, when the company played before a packed house.

At Markham as a dialect comedian has then all backed off the boards and he kept things going from the rise of the curtain to the finale with his quaint wit and funny expressions. There have been Swedish characters in most of the comedies of the past, but Ole Olsson, Hans Hanson and Yon Yonson but Ole the Swede Detective has out on them all. Ole is a humorist, a philosopher, a philanthropist, and a sleuth all in one, and he gets by with a few words, and a few lines, which affords delight to lovers of the play.

Mr. Markham's part in the play is of course the chief center of interest. What Ole says and what Ole does is full of fun, and the audience follows him in eager anticipation of what he will carry out next in his comedy role. Seldom has a house been kept so continuously good humored as was that of Friday night, and it is really what counts with the people. They want to be amused, and Ole can sure amuse them to the ninth degree.

It is a good laughable show is Ole the Swede Detective and if one wants to laugh they should see it at Dally's Theatre, Tonight Prices 25-35c and 50cents.

Resolutions of Appreciation.
We, the Wisconsin Gideons in Convention assembled, hereby Resolve: That we express our hearty appreciation accorded us by the citizens and press of Grand Rapids in welcoming us to your beautiful city.

Also to the pastors for opening their churches to us and rendering helpful service.

Also to the Choirs and Musicians who have helped to make our services so pleasant.

Also to the Merchants' & Manufacturers' association for providing the Opera House for the afternoon meeting.

We wish to express our appreciation for the faithful and efficient service rendered by our retiring officers.

Resolved that we express our deepest sympathy to our Bro. H. S. Appleton, Wis., in the loss of his beloved wife.

We further resolve to express our deepest sympathy to Bro. and Sister William I. Rothmeyer of Janesville in the tragic death of their son Willard. Dated and signed this 9th day of May, 1915.

Committee, W. J. Knights, Ira D. Dants, W. T. Umbreit.

The Maxwell Wins.
—The following is the text of a telegram received from Spokane, Washington, by C. E. Stebbins of Detroit, sales manager for the Maxwell Motor Sales Corporation: "Maxwell wins low gas economy test Spokane automobile show. Ford was second, a Franklin Dodge fourth. Conditions—each car given one quart of gasoline, car running further on low gas test. Maxwell traveled four miles and seventy five yards. Regular demonstrator used." Kampe & Schill are the local agents for the Maxwell.

Notice to Pioneers.
—We hereby extend an invitation to school, lodges, churches, and to sportsmen to hold a picnic at the site of the Pavilion, during the day or evening without any charge to use the same. Phone 443 and make arrangements for reservation. Grand Rapids Street Railroad Co. 1t.

The slander suit brought against Rev. Anthony Jacobs of Waupaca by N. Cohen, a merchant of that city, will probably not come to trial in circuit court. Mr. Cohen said he had advised his daughter with Mr. Jacobs and would ask that the case be dismissed.

Too many men spend their money before getting it.

MACKINNON BLOCK DAMAGED BY FIRE

The F. MacKinnon block located at the west end of the bridge had a narrow escape from total destruction on Wednesday evening of last week, when fire was discovered in the building which occupies the eastern part of the block.

The fire was discovered about 7 o'clock, at which time flames were issuing from the back window of the building, and the fire was confined to the room in which they started.

As it was the stock in the Dunigan store was practically a total loss, although it is covered by insurance. The smoke also went thru the partition into the Jung paint store and the Matthews lathing shop, and while the flames did not get into this part of the building there was some damage by the dense smoke that poured into this compartment. Most of the tenants up stairs made preparations to move, although those right over the Dunigan store could not do much in their compartments owing to the thick smoke that filled the place.

The heat was so intense in the Dunigan store that the plate glass windows in the front were all cracked and broken, and it is estimated that the damage to the building will be about $500.00.

It was a very narrow escape for the building and had the fire had a few minutes more before being discovered there is no question but what the structure would have been a total wreck. It is not known how the fire started, but it is supposed to have been from spontaneous combustion, as there was no fire of any kind in the room where it originated.

PUT TO LAST REST
Monroe Dunn's Common Ballot Rejected by Assembly.

Stevens Point Journal.—Monroe Dunn's common ballot was put to last rest by the Wisconsin assembly Wednesday, when its adoption for compulsory use in primary and general elections was rejected by a vote of 54 to 31, via the "indefinite postponement" rule.

Assemblyman Hambrecht of Grand Rapids was author of the bill. Messrs. Frecheff and Kurlenacker of La Crosse county, the home of Mr. Dunn, the author of the bill, opposed it. Dunn had anything to say about being good for a fellow that had fallen out of an automobile, but that as yet he had not discovered any information on this subject. There were directions for curing chilblains, rheumatism, corns, warts, and other ailments, but the word automobile had apparently been invented since the label on this particular bottle was printed. Upon inquiry it was discovered that on the day before Mr. Hambrecht and his son George were engaged in moving some things to their new home near the Eddy. The car was being driven by George, and Mr. Hambrecht occupied a place in the back of the rig. It seems that George was not wearing any seat belt, being an indolent young man and desirous of doing as much work as possible in a given space of time. (It is supposed that he contracted this habit while working on automobiles.) Anyway, he was a hard story so soft as coming, when the vicinity of the Cannan residence was reached the car struck one of these thank-you-ma-ams that have been washed out by the recent rains, and the car rolled over on its side. Mr. Hambrecht was not hurt, but he had no photograph with him, nor any instrument by which he could tell just how high he went, but anyway, when he came down the car wasn't there any more, and the result was that he hit on the nation pavement every Sunday at 9:30 A. M. Communion services will be held in the English language on Sunday, May 30, at 10:30 A. M. The celebration of the Holy Communion and the reception of new members will follow the Communion services.

On Monday, May 24, at 2:30 the members and friends of the Ladies Aid Society will enjoy a demonstration of aluminum ware in the church. Refreshments will be free and served to all.

Found Not Guilty.
Douglas Grizzly Bear, the Winnipeg Indian who was charged with the murder of his wife in Marathon county last March was acquitted by a jury in circuit court at Wausau late Friday afternoon. The jury was less than two hours in deliberation. Grizzly Bear, throughout the trial, contended that he did not know whether he had killed his wife or not. His story was that he and his wife had both been drinking and that it was early in the morning that he woke up in a country road and found his dead wife beside him.

Leaves for California.
Johnathan Reinhardt and daughter Miss Agnes leave for Los Angeles, California today, where they intend to spend the summer visiting with Mr. Reinhardt's brother. Should they like it out there they may decide to remain there permanently, but it is very likely that they will return in the fall and reside in this city.

Reinhardt sold his large farm in the town of Rudolph the past year and intends to retire from active work.

Death of an Infant.
Mr. and Mrs. Steve Prusynski of Elroy are mourning the death of their infant son Leonard, who died last Wednesday, May 12th, after a short illness. He was one year, one month and 20 days old. The funeral was held in this city on Friday from the Polish Catholic church, Rev. Ciesinski conducting the services.

He was brought to the hospital and has since been making good progress toward recovery.

Band Reorganized.
In accordance with a call issued by Dan Gill, the Grand Rapids band held Monday evening at the City Hall and indulged in a couple of hours of practice. Twenty men responded to the call and the indications are that the boys are going to take considerable interest in the band. The idea is to get into as good shape as possible and probably secure a competent director during the fall who will take hold of the organization and make a good band of it. With a staff of good members there is no reason why something should not be accomplished.

SCHOOL CHILDREN TO HOLD CARNIVAL

The scholars of the Lincoln high school are making preparations for a carnival which they will put on May 23th, and according to all accounts the expectations of the children it will be something that will be worth attending.

The word carnival means up a bunch of possibilities for the children to spread themselves in a manner that is not generally possible in ordinary entertainments, and it would seem as if they will be able to do all they claim, that is, furnish entertainment for all that cares to go and see the performance.

The carnival will be staged in the fair grounds adjoining the Lincoln school, and is an ideal spot for the event.

There will be foot races, horse races, pie eating contest, track events of all kinds, and other events that can be held only at a first class carnival. Mr. E. Brown, physical instructor at the school, will assist the boys in the work of staging the carnival and it is expected that the affair will be one of the big events of the year.

An Old Ambassador's Revelations of the Inner History of Famous Episodes Heretofore Cloaked in Mystery

Chronicle by ALLEN UPWARD

THE SUEZ CANAL SHARES

"Ah, my friend, so it has happened to you also to have business with these financiers!"

I turned in surprise, and beheld the ambassador coming down the steps of the house. He was alone, and carried in his hand with some papers a small leather bag with which he appeared to be bustling with share certificates. I stopped and waited for his excellency to reach the pavement.

"You flatter me too much," I said, answering his remark. "I was not about to trouble MM. de Rothschild. In fact, I was on my way to the office of the Temps; but I am in no hurry, and if you should desire my escort as I see you are bringing with you."

The ambassador affected to glance at his pocketbook as if he had remembered it for the first time, and at once proceeded to stow it inside the breast of his coat.

"You will at least consent to breakfast with me in one of those cafes which are patronized by the gentlemen of the Bourse, and which I am told are not so bad," he said, putting his arm in mine. The spring sun shone brightly on the pavement and the fronts of the houses, and the approach to the Bourse was crowded with flower girls, who offered us their nosegays as we moved away.

"The business which I have transacted this morning has reminded me of an affair of which I believe we have never spoken together," the ambassador continued, "and which I only harbor in my mind. The spring sun shone brightly on the pavement and the fronts of the houses, and the approach to the Bourse was crowded with flower girls, who offered us their nosegays as we moved away."

"You are right in what you say," he returned. "It is not a question of Asquith or Lloyd-George, however, but of the famous Rothschilds."

Before I could make any reply, he stopped abruptly in front of a restaurant whose appearance seemed to inspire him with confidence. We entered, and the ambassador, who was evidently in a generous mood, ordered a sumptuous repast, to be preceded in with a bottle of Veuve Clicquot.

As soon as the waiter had departed, however, to the very ground, his excellency took up his napkin and his pen, and in the autumn of the year 1873 I was sent for by M. D'Orsay, who at that time held the portfolio of foreign affairs, to his private residence.

On my arrival I found him closeted with M. de Lesseps, that great man whom France forgives the mistakes of his old age, in consideration of the glory which he had won in the past.

"I had already known the acquaintance of M. de Lesseps, whose former connection with the diplomatic body had naturally increased the interest with which I regarded him. On this occasion he received me with great cordiality, as did the minister, who at once introduced the subject on which they wished to consult me."

"I have invited you here," he said, "not on political business, but in order to ascertain if you are disposed to accept a private mission which the Viceroy of Egypt wishes to entrust to you. Although in the execution of this mission you will be acting without instructions from my department, yet I believe you will find that the services which you render to M. de Lesseps will by no means displease the French government."

"I will put the matter before you in two words," he said. "The khedive of Egypt is the possessor of 170,000 shares in the Suez Canal company, which it is believed that he may be willing to dispose of. A syndicate of capitalists has been formed here, which is anxious to acquire these shares, and it has been suggested that you should be asked to sound the khedive on the subject, and if possible to negotiate the purchase."

"Is the syndicate of which you speak connected with the canal company, by any chance?" I asked M. de Lesseps.

"He shook his head decidedly. "I am not even myself interested in it," he answered, "except from the point of view that, as chairman of the company, I desire to see these shares in the hands of the company's friends. However, I have provided myself with a list of the members of the syndicate."

"He handed me a document containing about a dozen names. Two or three were those of bankers of some repute; the remainder were absolute nobodies of whom I had never heard."

"I started at him in absolute consternation."

"But my dear Viceroy," I exclaimed, "have you any assurance that these persons command the necessary funds to carry out so enormous a transaction? This will be an affair of a hundred millions!"

"I answer for that part of it," interposed the minister, before M. de Lesseps had time to speak. "There is no question of the money being found."

"And in case the khedive should require guarantees?" I persisted, beginning to feel my way toward a solution.

"If it should become absolutely necessary, you may offer him the guarantee of the French government, but that is a point which you must avoid raising, if possible; and in any case you must be extremely careful not to let it reach the ears of Colonel Warton, the British representative in Cairo."

"At length I thought I could understand something of the situation. Turning again to M. de Lesseps, I inquired: "And you, M. le Viceroy, am I to be equally careful that your interest in this matter does not transpire?"

"The old man smiled, and shook his head again, but with less energy. "There is no reason," he said, "why I should not be informed that I am to be the agent in the negotiation from the point of view I have spoken of. The fact is, he went on, assuming a more confidential tone, 'that a difficulty has already arisen between the Suez Canal company and the khedive, of which I should be glad to avoid the repetition. Last year, owing to certain differences with the British government on a question of tolls, the company was obliged to threaten to close the canal to their ships of war. No sooner was this threat made known, than Ismail Pasha took it upon himself to interfere, in his character of the principal shareholder, and to strenuously forbid the company to adopt any such course. We have reason to think that this action was the result of representations by the French government through their envoy, and you will agree with me that this is a form of pressure which could no longer be brought to bear if the shares of the company were held by private Frenchmen."

"I nodded my head. Everything was now clear to me."

"Let me see if I rightly understand this affair," I said, looking from one to the other of my companions. "I am to proceed to Cairo as a private individual, the agent of the gentlemen whose names are written on this paper, on whose behalf I am to induce the khedive to transfer to them his shares in the canal. Should it become necessary, I am to offer to his highness in confidence the guarantee of the French government. At the same time, as a patriotic Frenchman, I am to permit myself the pleasure of thinking that this transaction will deprive Great Britain of the opportunity of making any effective remonstrance, should the Suez Canal company at any future time find it necessary, for financial reasons, to close the canal to her merchant ships."

"M. de Lesseps smiled and nodded. The minister gave me a look of intelligence."

"You have exactly comprehended the position," he was good enough to say, "and I see that we did not do wrong to select you. Now go and make your preparations to start as quickly as possible—and be careful not to come near the Quai d'Orsay till the whole thing has been arranged."

"I bowed, and made my adieu. With me, I was provided with letters of introduction which speedily obtained for me a private interview with Ismail Pasha. The character of this khedive is well known. His reckless extravagance had reduced his country to bankruptcy, and it was on this extravagance that I relied as the motive for inducing him to offer the which I was empowered to make."

"The palace at Cairo, in which he resided, was a strange mixture of European and Oriental luxury. Figure to yourself marble courts surrounded by myrtle-trees and fountains, leading into saloons which might have been upholstered from Paris. This bizarre combination reproduced itself in the person of Ismail Pasha, whose swarthy eastern features contrasted strangely with his western manners."

"I have the honor to wait upon you in the name of the French government," he said, as soon as the ceremonial salutations had been exchanged, "on behalf of an influential syndicate of bankers in Paris, who have charged me to lay before you a proposal of some magnitude, and which relates to the Suez Canal."

"I saw his dark eyes glitter as I pronounced this name. He responded morosely."

"I am tired of the Suez Canal, M. le Baron. It has led to my fall from it, and it is, besides, a cause of many political embarrassments. But go on; explain your proposal."

"It is one which, if you accept it, may relieve your highness of some of those embarrassments of which you speak," I answered respectfully. "At the same time the political susceptibilities which are aroused by every transaction relating to the canal company, I desire to ask that this negotiation may remain a secret entirely between your highness and the persons for whom I act."

"A frown crossed his face as I made this request, which was easy to see provoked his suspicions."

"If it is a mere question of private finance on which you approach me, I have no objection to what you propose," he replied cautiously. "But if it should turn out to involve political considerations, I will evidently be necessary for me to consult with my advisers before giving you an answer. However, I will hear what you have to say."

"Thus encouraged, I came boldly to the point."

"It is above all a question of private finance," I declared. "There is no question of the money being found."

"And in case the khedive should require guarantees?" I persisted, beginning to feel my way toward a solution.

"If it should become absolutely necessary, you may offer him the guarantee of the French government, but that is a point which you must avoid raising, if possible; and in any case transferring these shares to a suitable purchaser, with the same freedom as any other member of the company."

"Ah!" he interrupted, "I see what it is you want. You propose to make me an offer for some of these shares?"

"For the whole of them, your highness," I returned, bowing.

"What! Do you mean what you say? These shares are worth at the very least one hundred millions!"

"That is the sum which is mentioned in my instructions."

"Ismail Pasha gazed at me in consternation."

"But I have never even entertained the idea of parting with these shares! It is true that I find them unremunerative. Are you aware that the interest on them is deferred?"

"I have understood something of the sort," I said carelessly. "My duty, however, is merely to ask if your highness will accept for them the sum which you have just named. My principals have believed that in consequence of the unfortunate state of the Egyptian finances, you would probably sooner or later consider the question of realizing the value of this property, and their enterprise has led them to make what is perhaps a premature effort to secure it."

"But I do not say that it is premature," he stopped, and bent his eyes thoughtfully on the ground for some moments."

"I have made no attempt as yet to ascertain the value of my shares," he said, presently, regarding me with a searching look. "Perhaps I might obtain better terms in London, if I were to make it known that I was willing to dispose of them."

"I drew myself up with an aggrieved air."

"I venture to remind your highness that such a step would be a violation of our compact of secrecy. Unless you find anything unsatisfactory in the terms offered by the syndicate which harem, whose name was Fatmeh, and who turned out to possess a mania for the jewelry of the palace royal. The negotiation was attended with some risk, on account of the rigorous precautions which are observed in guarding the access to the apartments of the women of the East."

"I had no reason to complain of the good faith of this charming creature. Within two days I was seated for the first time at the table of the khedive, and found myself received with the greatest cordiality by the khedive. He informed me that he had decided to close with the offer of the syndicate, subject merely to a question of terms. He seemed to consider the price of the shares should be increased by another ten million francs, and I undertook to communicate this counter proposal to Paris at once, and to let him know the result."

"But I have passing through the gates of the palace on my way out, I ran almost into the arms of the one man in Cairo whom I was anxious to avoid—Colonel Warton. We were old acquaintances, and he recognized me instantly, though I at first feigned not to remember him."

"My dear Baron, well met!" he shouted in his brusque Egyptian fashion. "What good wind blows you here? I see you have been 'fiddling' old Ismail; nothing fresh about the canal, I hope?"

"Pardon, my dear colonel, but you are under a misapprehension," I replied, with a little reserve. "It is not the diplomatist whom you see in me at present. I am in Cairo simply as a private visitor, and if I have paid my respects to the khedive, it is not on behalf of the Quai d'Orsay that I have been to see him."

"He gazed at me with some suspicion."

"I have it your own way, my dear fellow; though you are the last man I should have expected to come to Cairo as a matter of pleasure. The ed to admit the odious whom my friend had promised me."

"It was Fatmeh herself!"

"If this meeting had been the result of a deep-laid plan to entrap me, instead of a pure coincidence, which I firmly believe it was, the result could not have been more disastrous. Overwhelmed with confusion, I had no time to warn myself against this intelligent woman, before she had advanced toward me, and pronounced my name with the most gratifying ardor."

"As for the poor colonel, he was simply struck dumb at perceiving that my acquaintance with the inner arrangements of the Egyptian court was not less than his own. I enjoyed my triumph over him with rapidity, however, for I decided every moment that Fatmeh should make some reference to the motive of my former visit."

"The colonel maintained an obstinate silence as we came away together. Probably he accused me in his own mind of having deceived him, but he said nothing, and we parted on friendly terms; though he did not renew his offer to become my cicerone in the Egyptian capital."

"The next day I received this message from Paris—of course in cipher: "Tell khedive we consider our first offer represents the value of shares, but do not break off negotiation."

"Much annoyed at this imprudent bagging at such a moment, I hastened to the palace to see what I could do. Whom should I see coming out as I entered but Colonel Warton?"

"The great man was with a dry smile. "I am sure you are constant in your friendly attentions to Ismail," was all he said as he passed on."

"To compensate for this mortification, I found the khedive in a yielding mood. I represented to him that the hundred millions was the utmost that my syndicate felt justified in paying, and after a very few words he gave way, and definitely agreed to accept that amount."

"Late in the afternoon, on returning to my hotel, I found a telegram marked 'Urgent' waiting for me in my room. It was from M. Buffard himself, and contained these words: "British government has heard of intended purchase and objects. Return to Paris at once, en route for London."

"I knew in an instant to whom I was to attribute this frightful blow. Which was the beautiful Fatmeh, or the khedive himself, who had betrayed me. It was evident that Colonel Warton had fathomed the secret of my mission, and had instigated this interference of his government."

"On my arrival at the Quai d'Orsay, six days later, M. Buffard explained the situation to me."

"What has happened," he said, "is this. Lord Derby, who holds the portfolio of foreign affairs, has verbally informed M. Gavard, our representative, that the queen's government understands that the khedive has been asked to transfer his shares to a syndicate acting on behalf of the French government, and it is to this that they object. All that is necessary is to convince them that the syndicate proceeds from a private syndicate, entirely independent of us, in which case we may hope that their prohibition will be withdrawn. You must proceed to London at once. Do not trouble yourself with Lord Derby, who is a mere instrument. Go straight to M. Disraeli, the premier; it is to him that we must address ourselves. Explain to him on whose behalf you are acting, and the affair may yet be terminated satisfactorily."

"I could do nothing but obey. On the evening of the following day, the 25th of November, I reached London, and as soon as I had changed my dress, drove straight to Downing street."

"The English premier received me with an urbanity worthy of the Faubourg St. Germain, and insisted on my lighting a cigar and refreshing myself with a brandy and soda water, before he would permit me to say a word."

"You must not think you are a stranger to me," he was good enough to say. "I am not ignorant of the distinguished reputation you have earned among the European chancelleries."

"Your sentiments do me too much honor, M. le Premier," I responded. "I only regret that I am not in a position to repeat them to the French government."

"I authorize you to repeat them, I repeat it," he exclaimed, falling to understand me."

"Alas! that is impossible," I explained. "I am not here in any official capacity, and therefore I could not take it on myself to repeat expressions addressed to me as a private individual."

"An expression of apparent bewilderment crossed M. Disraeli's face, succeeded by one of cordial friendliness."

"Then you are not here on behalf of your government?" he cried out. "This is a visit which I owe to your personal regard for me! I insist that you shall allow me to tell your glass."

"You distinguish me too much in consenting to place me on such a footing," I answered, slightly confused. "In effect, I have acted as if I were a certain financial syndicate with which I am associated, and which I feel sure that you will not refuse."

"You would do wrong to doubt it, my dear Baron," he returned with undiminished cordiality. "Rest assured that if this favor is in my power it is already yours. But explain your story."

"A thousand thanks, M. le Premier. The syndicate I refer to is composed of certain well-known capitalists, whose operations have received a check in consequence of a misapprehension created in the mind of Lord Derby."

"You astonish me!" M. Disraeli spoke in a tone of surprise. The next moment he lay back in his chair and smiled good-naturedly, as he added: "But after all, it is not only I who have been deceived, but the French government, which has been deceived by the English government."

"I followed him out, and we proceeded by a route which was less novel to me than he supposed, to a certain door situated in the rear of the khedive's residence. We were admitted by a eunuch, and led along a succession of passages, some of them familiar to me, to an apartment which I did not recognize. No sooner had we reached it, however, than a bell was sounded, and the curtain which concealed an adjoining chamber was lifted."

that immediately carried me back to my boyhood days," said a visitor to New York. "While walking along one of the uptown streets yesterday I saw a crowd of youngsters seemingly interested in a gambling game. They were playing 'barber' or 'rather,' 'shooting' games. Their line of talk puzzled me at first, but as I watched the lads I soon heard them use the same words as I did when I was a boy. 'Fens,' 'no ebbs,' 'no punching,' 'knuckle down tight,' etc. The usual characters were playing."

Marbles are the same yesterday, today and forever. Even are the most conservative individuals in the world. They keep the same customs at their games that they used many decades ago. "I have already seen some very noticeable signs of spring in this town try of the Bourse—when they perceive the chance for a favorable stroke, politics is the last consideration which enters into their heads. Well, it appears that Lord Derby objects to their proceedings, for a reason which it is not easy to understand, and he has even forbidden the poor khedive to entertain an offer which I was empowered to make to him on behalf of the associates."

"The countenance of the English premier assumed an expression of the most profound annoyance."

"Ridiculous!" he muttered. "It is incredible! What reason could he possibly have had for this absurd prohibition?"

"It seems that they have persuaded him that there was a political significance in this transaction, that these shares were to be acquired for the French government, in a word."

"M. Disraeli turned on me a look of the most perfect surprise."

"But surely that it not so?" he inquired. "I have just understood you to tell me that there is a question here simply of a private speculation?"

"Without doubt. The government of France holds itself entirely aloof from the affair, on the contrary."

"I understand. Then what you ask of me is, to inform Lord Derby that he is mistaken in supposing that the French government interests itself in your negotiations?"

"Perfectly," I answered, a little disconcerted, however. "In that case, am I forbidden to hope that you will prevail on him to withdraw his prohibition?"

"There will no longer be any reason for maintaining it," was the reply. "It is rather a question how he could ever have been deceived into a belief so groundless. Perhaps you can suggest some reason for this strange mistake?"

"Thus encouraged, I ventured to pronounce the name of Colonel Warton, which M. Disraeli received with a frown."

"It happened that this officer met me in Cairo," I explained, "and became aware that I was in communication with Ismail Pasha. I did not believe myself obliged to take him into my confidence, and it is doubting this reserve which has provoked his interference."

"It is perfectly shameful!" the premier exclaimed with immense indignation. "You have done right to complain to me of this person, whose unjust suspicions have inflicted a serious injury upon your friends."

"It is true that the colonel had formerly made my acquaintance over a diplomatic transaction," I added, "and this may have caused him to connect my proceedings with the idea of politics."

"M. Disraeli smiled, and shook his head playfully at me."

"Ah, Baron, you see that your terrible reputation pursues you," he observed. "How can you be surprised if people refuse to recognize in the most astute diplomatist of Europe, the innocent traveler of a harmless commercial syndicate?"

"When I finally turn myself away from this unaccompanied me to the door, where he renewed his expressions of regret at Lord Derby's unfortunate mistake, and warmly assured me of his own perfect belief in the indifference of the French government."

The ambassador heaved a sigh, and commenced rolling up his napkin as if he had nothing more to tell me."

"But you have not finished your story," I reminded, seeing him beckon to the waiter for his bill."

"His excellency regarded me with stern surprise."

"Is it possible that you have neglected to bear in mind the date which I have assigned to this conversation?" he demanded."

"My dear ambassador, you forget that all have not your extraordinary memory for these dates you speak of. I returned with some reluctance. At least count to remind me of what happened on this occasion."

His excellency shrugged his shoulders."

"You compel me to resume? Good. The following morning a copy of the Times was laid before me at breakfast. I opened it, and the first thing on which my eyes fell was this passage: "We have today to make a somewhat startling announcement. The British government have bought from the khedive shares of the Suez canal to the amount of £4,000,000 sterling. In the complete secrecy with which this transaction has been carried out, a transaction which it is impossible to separate in our thoughts from the question of England's future relations with Egypt, we trace the hand of M. Disraeli."

"And so on. I had been deliberately and shamefully deceived. While M. Disraeli was pretending to grant me everything I wished, he actually held the khedive's assignment in his pocket. It has been the most humiliating experience of my career."

"I tried to look as though I shared his excellency's indignation."

"And did the French government take no action?" I inquired respectfully."

"How could they? I have related what passed between us. This astute man had carefully set himself to draw from me an explicit assurance that my government were without interest in the disposal of these shares. If I had dared to remonstrate, I should have been regarded as a perfectly entitled to bid against the syndicate of private speculators. This baseless intrigue was too skillfully planned to leave any opening for protest."

The ambassador rose abruptly, flung down a gratuity for the waiter, and stalked out of the cafe."

As we walked away, the influence of the sunshine and the balmy air seemed to soothe his excited mood."

"After all, it was poor Fatmeh who came off the worst," he remarked in a mournful tone, as we returned past the Bourse. "She did not live long to enjoy the little gifts which I had presented to her."

"How? Do you mean to say—?"

"Her fate has remained a mystery. But I have always feared that it was a question of the bowstring—that Colonel Warton intended to obtain this diabolical revenge!"

NEAT TRAVELING COAT

CAN BE DEVELOPED IN A VARIETY OF MATERIAL.

Styles Just Now May Be Said to More Nearly Meet the Requirements of the Wearer Than Any Previously Introduced.

Coats for motoring and traveling more nearly meet every possible requirement demanded of them than have any heretofore introduced. They are roomy throughout, comfortable, smartly tailored and express a chic ensemble that could not be improved upon.

Here, for example, is one that may be developed in club-checked or blue serge, covert cloth, pongee, or even linen crash. The collar can be left open as well as closed by unbuttoning the right overlapping front of the coat and turning it back in a triangular lapel.

The front of the coat shows a broad belt introduced from the sides through oblique eyelets. A double-breasted effect is maintained both in the blouse and skirt portions, which brings the line of closing well over the left side.

The flared upstanding collar is held erect by a band that encircles the base of the neck, then turns downward, following the line of closing of the blouse. It fastens with a row of flat nickel buttons.

The skirt of the coat is gathered beneath the belt, but at the sides and to back the length from shoulder to hem are in one piece flaring below the waist.

Note the clever pockets which so consistently repeat the buttoned band arrangement of the collar.

In a train of the Paris Metro, or subway, the attention of other passengers was attracted to a pretty young woman dressed as a Red Cross nurse. Presently a soldier entered the car—a soldier with his head almost completely enveloped in bandages. The young woman flew to him and asked in a voice full of maternal solicitude:

ANTI-TREATING BILL PASSES ASSEMBLY

SALE OF LIQUOR FOR CONSUMPTION OF FAMILY IS NOT PROHIBITED.

KILL ONE DAY OF REST ACT

Smith Measure Providing for One Day of Rest in Seven Was Defeated in the Assembly by a Vote of 48 to 28.

Madison, May 13, 1915.

The assembly passed the Heden bill prohibiting "treating" to intoxicating liquors. A motion made by Assemblyman Hanson of Manitowish to kill the bill was lost, 29 to 47. The bill provides that treating shall not be allowed in places where intoxicating liquors are sold and requires the keeper of the place to post a sign reading, "Public treating of intoxicating liquors is forbidden by law."

The bill provides that the sale of liquors to any person for the consumption of members of his immediate family shall not be prohibited. The penalty for violation of the law is a fine of from $5 to $25.

One Day of Rest Bill Killed.

The assembly killed the Smith bill providing for one day of rest in seven for employees in industry and mercantile establishments. The motion to kill the bill was made by Assemblyman Lauren and it prevailed, 48 to 28.

The assembly concurred in the Heden bill, prohibiting employment agencies from sending girls and women to places of bad repute.

Two separate bills were killed; one providing that the office of any person holding a county, city or school district office shall be declared vacant on the expiration of the incumbent for an original offense growing out of the administration of his office, and a bill repealing the law relating to the publication of notices of sale of real estate under execution.

The Potts bill, extending the time for payment of county and state taxes by local and county treasurers from the first Monday in February to the first Monday in March, was ordered to a third reading.

Amend Embalming Bill.

The assembly amended the Hambrecht bill relating to the practice of embalming and the transportation of dead bodies by providing that no one should be licensed as an embalmer unless he had at least an education equal to that given in the eighth grade of the common and parochial schools. The bill was amended to order to engrossment and a third reading.

Secretary Martin said the commission was the author of the so-called jilby bill. This statement was made on the floor of the senate by Senator Bray, discussing a bill giving the commission power to regulate the speed of interurban cars.

Raise for Judges Refused.

The bill coming from the judiciary committee of the senate and raising the salary of the judges of the Civil court in Milwaukee from $3,000 to $3,600 was killed. By a vote of 30 to 17 the bill was refused engrossment.

Senator Martin said judges should go to county boards to obtain increases in salary.

The teachers' retirement fund is not self-sustaining, was a statement made by Senator Culbertson, speaking for his bill for an investigation of all pensions. The Culbertson bill is amended to call for a committee to investigate the question of pensions at an expense not to exceed $50,000.

The indefinite postponement of the bill which was originally recommended by the Wisconsin tax commission in 1910-11 before the general income tax law now operative in the state, was enacted. This bill recommended the taxation of the income on that portion of the assets of the company which were properly apportioned to the Wisconsin policy holders.

Anti-Tipping Bill to Assembly.

The anti-tipping question must be decided by the assembly. After much debate between Senator Timothy Burke and Senator Otto Bossard, Lieut-Gov. Dittmar ruled out of order the motion made by Senator Burke for a reconsideration of the veto by which the senate passed the Bossard anti-tipping bill over the veto of Gov. E. L. Philipp.

Among the measures ordered to third reading was the Everett bill, permitting county treasurers to serve more than two terms. The Zima bill, which gives the right to use land purchased for other purposes for public playgrounds was amended to apply to Milwaukee only, and sent to third reading.

Section Hands on Strike.

Oshkosh.—About twenty-five section men employed on the Soo line at Oshkosh struck and demanded higher wages. It is estimated that about 1,000 section hands are on strike on the Soo line in Wisconsin.

Banker-Boosters to Meet.

Oconomowoc.—The Waubesa County Bankers' Development association will have a convention at Oconomowoc June 17. C. D. Probert of this city is vice president.

Woman Maintains Innocence.

Racine.—Mrs. Anna Koski, arrested in the connection with the death of her husband, who is supposed to have died as the result of poisoning, still maintains her innocence. She blames Geo. Sabljuk, a former boarder.

Pays for 1,700 Files.

Janesville.—Seventeen hundred dead files as the result of last week's fly swatting campaign were counted out and paid for by the committee of the civil league.

Judge in Auto Smash.

Racine.—Judge E. B. Belden of Circuit court, while driving his auto, collided with a laundry wagon driven by Andrew Anderson. The driver was thrown from the vehicle and badly cut and bruised. The judge was uninjured.

ens bill, for closed season for pickering in Forest county, and several bills which had come in from the senate committee on judiciary.

Senator Bennett of Vilanova introduced a bill in the senate amending the state highway aid law to provide for construction of highways under the county unit instead of the state unit system and providing that the state shall pay one-third of the cost of such highway improvements if they are approved by the state consulting engineer. State aid for any one year is limited to $500,000. The bill appropriates $15,000 annually, to pay the state expenses of administering the law and the salary of the state consulting engineer, who is to receive $4,000 a year. The county commissioners, who are to be paid by the several counties, are each to receive a salary of $1,000 a year. The bill in the main follows the Michigan state highway aid law.

Itinerary Legislation at Madison.

The itinerary has invaded the legislature. It came in a mysterious manner. A bill was introduced from the senate committee on judiciary which claimed to be a measure regulating the granting of franchises by cities and villages. It provided that no franchise to use streets should be granted by any city or village until the franchise had been submitted to the railroad commission. A permit is held to be the same as a franchise.

It was some time before members of the legislature were made aware that the itinerary was liable to be unloaded onto them. One of the commissioners in looking over the bill one day was struck with the idea that this meant jitneys and began to study the bill further.

Some railroad men who were charged with being at least godfather to the bill denied the impeachment, but admitted that with a few amendments the bill might be able to cover the problem of the itinerary regulation. Since that time it has been rumored that a substitute amendment had been prepared which covers the itinerary problem. The ones who are worrying now are members of the railroad commission, who see in the passage of the bill if it should pass, that their work will be doubled, at least in annoyance, if nothing else.

Anti-Hazing Bill Passes.

Senator Henry Culbertson made an uphill but unsuccessful fight for his substitute bill to check hazing in educational institutions receiving state funds. Senator Bossard contended that the bill if enacted into law would interfere with the work of the student court at the university, and he considered it good policy to encourage the work of this court. Senator Culbertson insisted that the student court has no authority. He asserted that most of the boys at the university are inclined to be orderly, but some of them, he said, encourage a "system of anarchy." He said, should be permitted to carry on acts of violence.

The act of violence to independent candidates was advanced. This measure provides that no candidate defeated in the primary be permitted to run as an independent unless he shall file a statement with the clerk of the board in which he will be an independent candidate if defeated. A bill was introduced appropriating $5,000 annually for three years to be spent strengthening and repairing levees on the Wisconsin river in Columbia and Sauk counties. Another bill was introduced reducing the cost of oil inspection from 10 to 7 cents per barrel.

The senate committee on corporations advanced the life insurance tax bill as a step by referring No. 55 to a substitute to the joint finance committee and recommending that No. 62 be indefinitely postponed.

Bill 55s proposed to change the existing tax law only by removing from the taxables the Wisconsin premiums receipts of domestic companies.

The indefinite postponement of the bill which was originally recommended by the Wisconsin tax commission in 1910-11 before the general income tax law now operative in the state, was enacted. This bill recommended the taxation of the income on that portion of the assets of the company which were properly apportioned to the Wisconsin policy holders.

WHITE GRUB TO BE HERE THIS YEAR

EXPERT ISSUES WARNING TO FARMERS OF PEST'S GREATEST ACTIVITY.

FINDS TWO TO SQUARE FOOT

Immense Damage Is Feared to Crops—No Means of Extermination Is Known—Feeds on Any Root.

Madison.—Farmers of Wisconsin are being warned against white grubs and the damage they cause by their sharp jaws and omnivorous appetites. This warning is being sent out by Prof. J. G. Sanders of the department of economic entomology and chief nursery inspector of the University of Wisconsin. Prof. Sanders has just returned from Grant county, where he says he found an average of two of these grubs to the square foot.

"When it is considered that when corn is planted in hills, say three feet apart, and rows are equal distance, giving each hill of corn nine square feet," he said, "it will be seen this means eighteen of these grubs to the hill. How long that hill will last after the grubs start work is only a matter of the size of the hill. Its ultimate destruction is unavoidable."

"I wish to warn the farmers of the state against using land devoted to state crops last year for hill crops. This is the year of greatest activity of the three year grub, and if corn, tobacco, potatoes and other hill crops are planted on ground where the June bug laid its eggs last year they will be utterly destroyed."

"Almost every kind of root is fit food for these grubs. They have been known to attack the roots of fruit trees when other food was denied them."

Prof. Sanders then explained the life history of the grub. He says the eggs were laid early last spring and the larvae did considerable damage. Burrowing deep into the ground, they withstood the winter weather and this spring came up to the surface to feed on tender roots.

BOY IS BURNED TO DEATH

Six Year Old Lad Sets Fire to Little Brother's Clothes—His Own Ignite.

Surgeon Jany.—Frank, 6 year old son of Charles Wallinger, died of burns received when playing with a fire brand. He was terribly burned from the hips up.

While his mother left the house and he arose to start a fire in the kitchen stove. After he had lighted it he took a fire brand, went into the bedroom, set fire to his brother's clothes and to the bed in which he was lying. Frank's own clothes caught fire, and he ran from the house into the back yard, screaming for help.

The Rev. P. Schumann, who was driving past the house, came to his help, wrapping him in a robe and extinguishing the flames. Mr. Schumann ran into the house just in time to save the baby from burning to death.

This is the second of Mrs. Wallinger's children who have died as a result of burns. Less than two years ago Frank set fire to the house and the little one burned to death.

DAVID ROSE IS BANKRUPT

Former Milwaukee Mayor Places Liabilities at $37,512.33 and Assets at $36,400.

Milwaukee.—Former Mayor David S. Rose filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in federal court here. The liabilities were given at $37,512.33 and the assets at $36,400.

Among the assets were included real estate valued at $20,000; 60,750 shares of stock in the Wisconsin Mining and Smelting company, valued at $1,000; fifty shares of stock in the Milwaukee Auditorium, valued at $500. The wearing apparel was listed at $200, library books at $100 and office furniture at $100.

Among the secured credits are the First National bank, Milwaukee, with notes of $11,650; Hollett, Sauter & Henkel, Chicago, with notes of $15,000; Moses M. Meyers, Chicago, $2,100.

The unsecured claims were in small sums from a number of local and out of town creditors.

Will Meet in Marshfield.

Grand Rapids.—Marshfield in Wood county has been selected for the meeting of the state organization of D. A. B. in October.

Examine Pupils Gratis.

Rhineland.—Working in conjunction with the Visiting Nurse association and the school board, physicians and dentists of Rhineland will make free medical and dental inspection of students during May.

Lumber Firm Is Started.

Shawano.—This city is to have a new retail lumber yard, three men coming here from Waushara to start the same. It will be known as Retail Lumber and Supply company.

Auto Injures Aged Man.

Racine.—Conrad Fox, 80 years old, one of the best known residents of this city, was seriously injured when the buggy he was driving was struck by an automobile, and he was thrown violently to the pavement.

Mondovi Man Is Moderator.

Mondovi.—At the annual convention of Congregational churches of the Eau Claire association, held in this city, the Rev. Arthur E. Fraser of New Richmond was chosen moderator.

Declaratory Winners.

Edgerton.—In the oratorical and declaratory contest by Edgerton, Stoughton, Jefferson, Whitewater and Fort Atkinson, the declaratory was won by Miss Margarette Melas of Stoughton, and the oratorical by Martha Severson of Edgerton.

Old Bayfield Resident Dead.

Waushara.—Antoine Picot, a resident of this city for the last twenty-seven years, died at his home in Bayfield.

CHIEF JUSTICE DIES

JOSEPH G. DONNELLY PASSES AWAY AFTER SHORT ILLNESS.

Born in Milwaukee Jan. 4, 1856—Spent Four Years in Mexico as U. S. Consul General.

Milwaukee.—Judge Joseph G. Donnelly, chief justice of the civil courts, died following an illness of one week. He was stricken while on the bench and had to be removed to his home, where the end came.

Perhaps no Milwaukeean was better known than Judge Donnelly. As an after dinner speaker he had a wide reputation, possessed of a native wit that was ever ready for any occasion.

Born in Milwaukee, Jan. 4, 1856, he was educated in the schools of the city and lived all his life here with the exception of four years in Mexico, where he served as United States consul general.

He was graduated from St. Gall's academy in 1871, taught school for six years, and was appointed register of probate in 1877 by Judge John E. Mump. He held this position until 1893, when he was appointed Mexican consul by President Grover Cleveland.

In 1898 he was democratic candidate for congress and in 1901 candidate for district judge. He served as school commissioner from 1877 to 1879. When the civil courts were created Judge Donnelly was one of the first judges elected, and was honored by his fellow judges by being elected chief justice. He was re-elected upon the completion of his first term.

In 1877 he married Miss Lois Smith, Waupun, daughter of Capt. Avery Smith, pioneer settler. He was once president of the Milwaukee Bar association, and was a member of the Milwaukee Athletic club, the City club and the Old Stagers' club. Judge Donnelly is survived by his widow and six children, Emmett A., practicing attorney; Mrs. Robert Smith of Baltimore; Elizabeth, deputy clerk of civil courts; Theodore, teacher in West Division high school; Jeanette, who is at home, and Ruth, a student at the University of Wisconsin.

PLANNING A WARM WELCOME

Wausau to Play Host to G. A. R. Veterans at Annual Encampment on June 14.

Wausau.—The people of Wausau are giving members of G. A. R. post No. 55, G. A. R. in planning a warm welcome for veterans who attend the forty-ninth annual encampment, which convenes in Wausau on June 14 for three days.

According to plans of the arrangement committee, about 1,000 veterans are expected to be present, besides thousands of other men and women of the allied organizations. Commander Samuel A. Cook of Neenah held a conference with the local committee arranging a tentative program. He said he had visited many posts in Wisconsin since the first of the year, and at every place the cry is "On to Wausau." Mr. Cook stated that the veterans look forward to the encampment, and he believes that the attendance will eclipse that of any encampment in the last five years in spite of the fact that their ranks are fast thinning.

The Culbertson bill is amended to call for a committee to investigate the question of pensions at an expense not to exceed $5,000. The bill was ordered to the senate committee on motion of Senator Ackley.

Among the bills engrossed by the senate, was that bringing fraternal insurance companies more under control of the insurance commission and that relating to organization of domestic Lloyd's associations.

The Monk bill for the state police department was indefinitely postponed as was the Baxter bill, regulating child labor.

Income Tax Change Saved.
The bill from the excise and fees committee, which prohibits persons on the black list from entering saloons, was ordered engrossed. The Grell bill, which raises exemptions of a single person subject to income tax to $1,200 and of a man and wife to $1,600 was saved from indefinite postponement by means of substitute amendments.

Bills concurred in by the assembly included the Barwig bill to vacate cemeteries in Waupun, the Mulberger bill, relating to fish and game; the bill relating to the discharge of persons accused of murder, who had satisfied the plaintiffs; the Stev-

WHITE GRUB TO BE HERE THIS YEAR

EXPERT ISSUES WARNING TO FARMERS OF PEST'S GREATEST ACTIVITY.

FINDS TWO TO SQUARE FOOT

Madison.—Farmers of Wisconsin are being warned against white grubs and the damage they cause by their sharp jaws and omnivorous appetites. This warning is being sent out by Prof. J. G. Sanders of the department of economic entomology and chief nursery inspector of the University of Wisconsin. Prof. Sanders has just returned from Grant county, where he says he found an average of two of these grubs to the square foot.

"When it is considered that when corn is planted in hills, say three feet apart, and in rows an equal distance, giving each hill of corn nine square feet," he said, "it will be seen this means eighteen of these grubs to the hill. How long that hill will last after the grubs start work is only a matter of the size of the hill. Its ultimate destruction is unavoidable."

"I wish to warn the farmers of the state against using land devoted to sod crops last year for corn crops this year. This is the year of greatest activity of the three year grub, and if corn, tobacco, potatoes and other hill crops are planted on ground where the June bug laid its eggs last year they will be utterly destroyed."

"Almost every kind of root is fit food for these grubs. They have even been known to attack the roots of fruit trees when other food was denied them."

Prof. Sanders then explained the life history of the grub. He says the eggs were laid early last spring and the larvae did comparatively little damage. Burrowing deep into the ground, they withstood the winter weather and this spring came up to the surface to feed on tender roots.

Anti-Hazing Bill Passes.
Senator Henry Culbertson made an uphill but unsuccessful fight for his substitute bill to check hazing in educational institutions receiving state aid. The bill was defeated, but the hazing problem will be brought up again.

The bill, which would prohibit the use of force or threats to compel a student to join a fraternity or to leave one, was defeated by a vote of 18 to 22.

Amend Embalming Bill.
The assembly amended the Ham-brecht bill relating to the practice of embalming and the transportation of dead bodies by providing that no one should be licensed as an embalmer unless he had at least an education equal to that given in the eighth grade of the common and parochial schools. The bill was amended and ordered to engrossment and third reading.

Secretary Gettle of the railroad commission was the author of the so-called jenny bill. This statement was made on the floor of the senate by Senator Bray, discussing a bill giving the commission power to regulate the speed of interurban cars.

Raise for Judges Refused.
The bill coming from the judiciary committee to the senate and raising the salary of the judges of the Civil court in Milwaukee from $3,000 to $3,600 was killed. By a vote of 8 to 17 the bill was refused engrossment.

Senator Martin said judges should go to county boards to obtain increases in salary.

The teachers' retirement fund is not self-sustaining, was a statement made by Senator Culbertson, speaking for his bill for an investigation of all pensions. The Culbertson bill is amended to call for a committee to investigate the question of pensions at an expense not to exceed $5,000. The bill was ordered to the senate committee on motion of Senator Ackley.

Among the bills engrossed by the senate, was that bringing fraternal insurance companies more under control of the insurance commission and that relating to organization of domestic Lloyd's associations.

The Monk bill for the state police department was indefinitely postponed as was the Baxter bill, regulating child labor.

Income Tax Change Saved.
The bill from the excise and fees committee, which prohibits persons on the black list from entering saloons, was ordered engrossed. The Grell bill, which raises exemptions of a single person subject to income tax to $1,200 and of a man and wife to $1,600 was saved from indefinite postponement by means of substitute amendments.

Bills concurred in by the assembly included the Barwig bill to vacate cemeteries in Waupun, the Mulberger bill, relating to fish and game; the bill relating to the discharge of persons accused of murder, who had satisfied the plaintiffs; the Stev-

Section Hands on Strike.
Oshkosh.—About twenty-five section men employed on the Soo line at Oshkosh struck and demanded higher wages. It is estimated that about 4,000 section hands are on strike on the Soo line in Wisconsin.

Banker-Boosters to Meet.
Oconomowoc.—The Waukesha County Bankers' Development association will have a convention at Oconomowoc June 17. C. D. Probert of this city is vice president.

Woman Maintains Innocence.
Racine.—Mrs. Anna Kosala, arrested in connection with the death of her husband, who is supposed to have died as the result of poisoning, still maintains her innocence. She blames Geo. Sabjink, a former boarder.

Pays for 1,700 Files.
Janesville.—Seventeen hundred dead flies as the result of last week's fly swatting campaign were counted out and paid for by the committee of the civil league.

Judge in Auto Smash.
Racine.—Judge E. B. Belden of Circuit court, while driving his auto, collided with a laundry wagon driven by Andrew Anderson. The driver was thrown from the vehicle and badly cut and bruised. The judge was uninjured.

Miller to Address Graduates.
Oshkosh.—W. E. Miller, principal of the Wisconsin High school of Madison, will address graduates of Oshkosh High school at exercises on June 11. Supt. M. N. Melvor will preside.

Whittier to Give Address.

Mighty Fine
Yes, Mighty Fine
—and the price, gentlemen, is $20.

For this week we've planned a greater value-giving event that's just crammed, jammed full of interest to every man and young man within buying reach of the Live Store... A demonstration of our idea of Service and Satisfaction, aided and abetted by the finest Spring and Summer clothes direct from THE HOUSE OF KUPPENHEIMER.

We will show and sell this week a superb lot of 144 Suits in the newest styles; The Beaufort, The Biltmore, The Chester and The Wayne. In the leading fabrics and patterns of the hour, Glen Urquhart Plaids and Gun Club Checks predominating. In all sizes from 33 to 44, for tall men, short men and particularly for men who tip the scale at more than the average; all at the purse-pleasing price $20

This event is in the nature of a challenge, also. A challenge to any merchant, anywhere, to show the equals of the garments in this selection at less than $25 or $27.50. Frankly, Gentlemen, it can't be done; no store, unless organized as we are for greater value-giving; no store with a lesser patronage than ours, no store where buying and selling is less efficiently controlled by true economy, can hope to offer anything at anywhere near our feature price for this week's great buying event, $20.

MEN'S FIXINGS—Today, tomorrow, every day of the year, you will find the allied departments of the Live Store up and doing from neckties to dress shirts. In every dress accessory we play a leading part.

Men's Shirts—Hundreds of Eagle shirts in this great Summer showing, all styles, beautiful patterns, colors that defy the wash tub, quality that baffles the ravages of the iron. For this week a special showing of 98 new patterns at $1.00 to $3.50.

Men's Union Suits—If you want real comfort in a union suit, get a Lewis. We have them in half sleeves and three-quarter legs and sleeveless with knee legs, special sizes for short stout men and long thin men, all the way from $1.00 to $3.50.

STETSON—The biggest name in Hatdom. This is the store of the Stetson Hat. No arguments necessary for men and young men who know that mark means quality. What they may not know is the fact that here and here alone Stetson quality can be had. Other good top pieces at $1.00 to $3.00.

Straw Hats are Ready at the Live Store—You'll find the biggest, most satisfactory variety in town here—domestic straws, Milans Leghorns and Panamas, straight brims and curled brims, high tapering crowns and telescope crowns from 50c to $5.00.

Men's Shoes—Shoes with the mark of Crossett at $3.50 to $5.00 the pair, in every shape and size—shoes of comfort, style and sturdy wearing quality. Others at $2.50 and $3.00.

They visited the San Francisco exposition and also with Dan Reichel, who is located at Berkeley, and were well pleased with what they saw and the manner in which they were treated.

I. E. Wilcox has bought the Charles Natwick residence property on Fourth Avenue. The place is not only nicely situated for residence purposes but is also handy to the business part of town for his Ready-to-Wear business which he will locate there. Mr. Wilcox was compelled to vacate the Hoskinson property because of the fact that Mrs. Hoskinson intends to return here to make her home.

Just a few weeks ago we were complaining because there had been no rain this spring, and some of the pessimistic ones were predicting a dry summer like we had in 1910 and 1911. At the present time there is no indication of a short water supply, any drought for a time at least. It can cloud up and rain anytime without any apparent cause, and keep it up until the oldest inhabitant feels as if he were being imposed on, and has long since told a most distressing story. No doubt we will have some dry weather again sometime, but if the weather man would not bunch his hits in such a distressing manner it would be better for all concerned and it would be more pleasant living also.

U. S. DENOUNCES UNDER-SEA WAR

CABINET APPROVES NOTE

Kaiser's Government to Be Held Account for Death of American Citizens, Says Document—Explanation Asked.

Washington, May 12.—Germany has asked Ambassador Gerard at Berlin to notify the United States that submarine commanders have been specifically instructed not to harm neutral ships which are not engaged in hostile acts in the war zone, and that Germany will pay for damage sustained by such ships.

Washington, May 12.—President Wilson will not accept a vigorous protest against the sinking of the Lusitania, but he will insist on an explanation of the series of incidents connected with the submarine war waged around British Isles which resulted in the deaths of American citizens.

The president after three days of study in session, came to this decision last night and submitted his draft to the members of the cabinet. It was unanimously approved.

This decision, reached by President Wilson tonight, marks the first step in the policy which will be put before the United States as a result of the sinking of the Lusitania with the loss of more than 100 American lives.

The Kaiser's government also will be asked to explain the sinking of the Palapa, causing the death of Leon C. Thraher, an American.

Over the Lusitania, the attack by German planes on the American steamship "Cushing."

In firm and unmistakable terms, according to those familiar with the document, the president, after voicing the intense feeling of the United States over these happenings, demanded in the name of international law, that Germany adhere to the established rules of maritime warfare.

Unarmed merchant vessels, carrying non-combatants, must be visited and searched when encountered in the high seas, says the note, and passengers and crew be transferred to a place of safety before any prize is destroyed.

The document to be sent to Germany points out that American neutrality will be held to strict accountability for any attacks on American vessels or deaths of American citizens. It is said the United States denies the right on the part of Germany to carry on such methods of warfare and states that the mere giving of official notice of intention to commit an unjustifiable act does not make it lawful.

The events which follow if Germany refuses to comply with the expressed wishes of the note, would not be discussed by members of the cabinet tonight.

Roosevelt For Drastic Action.
Syracuse, N. Y., May 12.—Former President Roosevelt Tuesday night pleaded for prompt action by the United States on account of the Lusitania disaster, commenting on President Wilson's speech in Philadelphia. Mr. Roosevelt was particularly interested in that part of the president's speech in which the latter referred to "such a thing as a man being too proud to fight," and "a nation being so right that it does not need to convince others by force that it is right."

"The 150 babies drowned on the Lusitania, the hundreds of women drowned with them, and the American ship, the Gulfport, which was torpedoed, offer an eloquent commentary on the actual working of the theory of the sinking of the Lusitania, and that a policy of blood and iron can with efficiency be met with a policy of blood and water."

"Germany now offers to stop the practice of murder on the high seas if we will now abandon further neutral rights, which by her treaty she has solemnly pledged to see that we exercise without molestation."

"Without twenty-four hours' delay this country should and could take effective action by declaring that in view of Germany's murderous offenses against commerce with Germany shall be forthwith forbidden and all commerce of every kind permitted and encouraged with France, England and the rest of the civilized world."

Course Laid Out For Liner.

London, May 12.—The liner Lusitania was following the course laid out for it by the British admiralty when it was torpedoed by a German submarine off the south coast of Ireland Friday afternoon.

No Halt in Ocean Travel.
New York, May 12.—No general cancellation of the sailings of steamers, or of passengers engaged from New York to European ports has followed the sinking of the Lusitania, according to agents of steamship lines here. They say, however, that there has been an increase in the popularity of vessels flying neutral flags. It was estimated that 2,500 passengers are on board the various steamships from American ports bound for destinations that will take them within range of German submarine activity.

100 AMERICANS DIE

Charles Frohman, Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Elbert Hubbard, and Charles Klein Among Prominent U. S. Citizens Who Went Down With the Ship.

London, May 12.—Eleven hundred and fifty persons, according to latest official figures, lost their lives in the sinking of the Cunard liner Lusitania, which was torpedoed by a German submarine off the Old Head of Kinsale, Ireland, Friday afternoon.

Of the 138 Americans on board, more than 100 are believed dead.

The bodies of Charles Frohman, the theatrical manager, Dr. P. S. Pearson of New York, and Charles Klein, a Chicagoan, have been recovered. Officially given up as dead are: Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, multimillionaire; Charles Klein, playwright; Justus M. Forman, playwright; Elbert Hubbard, writer, and Mrs. Elbert Hubbard.

Living All Account For.
Although the Cunard officials insist that there may be few survivors of the Lusitania not yet reported, suffering from injuries at some lonely fishing hut or farmer's cottage, this hope finds no reflection in official circles. There it is declared the living are all accounted for. The latest available figures show:

Dead, passengers and crew, 1,150. Saved, passengers and crew, 777. Of the latter, 465 were passengers and 312 were members of the crew.

There is much complaint that the Cunard officials have made no systematic effort to recover bodies. Their troops have been at the scene of the wreck only twice. And they have made no effort to cruise well out from the coast where outgoing and incoming vessels report the presence of many bodies wearing lifeboats.

Scores Thrown From Boats.
Scores of the Lusitania's passengers, many of them women and children, after being placed in lifeboats, were dragged down with the ship when it sank, because the boats could not be lowered. Survivors attribute this fault to inefficiency among the crew.

Some of them were chopped away, overturning when they struck the sea, and hurled the occupants into the water. Some fell from a height of forty feet, others could not be released and were dragged down.

Handling of Ship Criticized.
Survivors, both American and British, who have arrived in London, severely criticized the manner in which the Lusitania was handled, both by the admiralty and officials of the Cunard line. These complaints summed up briefly, follow:

1. That the Lusitania, instead of being kept at top speed as she neared the Irish coast, slowed down, thus making her easy prey for the German submarines lying in wait for her.

2. That no convoy was placed over the Lusitania by the admiralty despite the known presence of German submarines.

3. That the Lusitania, instead of being kept at top speed as she neared the Irish coast, slowed down, thus making her easy prey for the German submarines lying in wait for her.

SHIFTS BLAME TO BRITISH

Kaiser's Foreign Office Holds That Cunard Liner Carried War Material and Could Not Be Treated as Merchant Vessel.

Berlin, via London, May 11.—The following dispatch has been sent by the German foreign office to the German embassy at Washington:

"Please communicate the following to the State Department: The German government desires to express its deepest sympathy at the loss of lives on board the Lusitania. The responsibility rests, however, with the British government, which through its plan of starving the civilian population of the world, has forced Germany to resort to retaliatory measures."

In spite of the German offer to stop the submarine war in case the starvation plan was given up, British merchant vessels are being generally armed with guns and torpedoes, so that a previous search was impossible.

They cannot, therefore, be treated as ordinary merchant vessels. A recent declaration made to the British parliament by the parliamentary secretary in answer to a question by Charles Montagu, stated that the British government had no right to expect that the German government would be armed and provided with hand grenades.

Besides it has been openly admitted by the English press that the Lusitania in previous voyages repeatedly carried large quantities of war material. On the present voyage the Lusitania carried 5,500 cases of ammunition while the rest of the cargo also consisted chiefly of contraband.

If England, after repeated official and unofficial warnings, considered herself able to maintain that she had no right to expect that the German government would be armed and provided with hand grenades.

Information to the effect was given to officials of the Cunard line who are making an investigation and assisting in the care of injured survivors and the search for bodies.

Capt. W. T. Turner of the Lusitania is in conference for hours with representatives of the Cunard line. When asked by press representatives if the explosion which resulted from the second torpedo had been caused by the blowing up of ammunition stored in the liner's hold, Captain Turner said:

"No, no. Ammunition had exploded, that would probably have torn the ship apart and the loss of life would have been much heavier than it was."

The statement of Captain Turner gave further basis to the belief that the liner's boilers blew up.

ASKS UNITED NATION

PRESIDENT URGES ALLEGIANCE TO HIGH IDEALS OF ALIEN-BORN IN SPEECH.

HUMANITY IS ABOVE ALL

Wilson Says Example of America Must Be Not Merely of Peace Because It Will Not Fight, But Peace Because It Is Healing and Elevating.

Philadelphia, May 12.—President Wilson gave to a gathering of 4,000 nation-wide Americans on Monday night the first intimation of what course the United States government will pursue in the situation resulting from the loss of more than 100 American lives on the Lusitania.

He spoke by implication, but his language intimated his remarks as meaning that while the United States would remain at peace it would seek to convince Germany of the injustice to mankind of the tragedy of last Friday.

"America," said the president, "must have the consciousness that on all sides of our shoulders and touching heart with all nations of mankind. The example of America must be a special example, and must be an example not merely of peace because it will not fight, but peace because of the influence of the world, and strife is not."

"There is such a thing as a man being too proud to fight. There is such a thing as being so right that it does not need to convince others by force that it is right."

These remarks precipitated a tumult of applause and patriotic enthusiasm, attended by a waving of thousands of small American flags. The president made no direct reference to the Lusitania tragedy, but the audience did not hesitate to read the application of his statement.

Introduced by Mayor Blankenburg, who spoke in distinctly German accent, a welcome and appeal for a single allegiance to the United States, the president carried forward the idea of the welding of foreign blood to the makeup of America by pointing out that the United States is a country of one's birth but to the land of one's adoption.

"While you bring," he said, "all countries with you, you come with a purpose of leaving all other countries behind you—bringing with it best of their spirit, but not looking over your shoulder or seeking to perpetuate what you leave in them. I would not certainly be one who would suggest that a man cease to love the place of his birth."

"It is one thing to love the place where you were born and another thing to dedicate yourself to the place where you go. You can't be an American who think of yourself in groups. America does not consist of groups. It is a national group is not yet an American."

"My advice to you is to think first not only of America but to think first of humanity, and you do not love humanity if you seek to divide humanity in jealous camps."

Some of the passages in his speech which the crowd applauded most loudly were these:

"I am sorry for the man who seeks to make personal capital out of the passions of his fellow man."

"He has lost the touch and ideal of America, for America was created to unite man and not by the passions that separate and divide mankind."

"The man who seeks to divide man from man, group from group, interest from interest in the United States is striking at its very heart."

"I was born in America. You are dreamed of what America was to be. I hope you brought the dreams with you. No man who does not see visions will ever realize any great enterprise."

There was a tremendous ovation as the president finished his speech.

Because of the present status of international affairs, extraordinary precautions had been taken to guard the president during his stay in Philadelphia. Seven hundred and fifty policemen had been detailed for this duty.

On his return trip from the hall he was escorted by three miles to the president's room, where he was met by a crowd of people. He was then escorted to his room, where he was met by a crowd of people.

All Who Took Part in Session Refuse to Make Any Comment—Germany Says Submarines Will Not Harm Neutral Vessels.

Washington, May 12.—Charles R. Crane of Chicago has been appointed by Secretary Bryan as one of the commissioners under the Bryan peace treaty with Russia, which was signed last October. He will go abroad on a special mission for the state department. It is presumed he is to go to Petrograd. But all information as to the object of his mission is denied at the state department and refused by Mr. Crane.

Former Attorney General Richard Olney of Massachusetts has been named by the state department as commissioner under a similar peace treaty with France. It is not known whether Mr. Olney is to be sent to France on any special mission in connection with the appointment.

Secretary Bryan conferred with Mr. Crane at some length as to plans for his work abroad. Later Mr. Crane saw the president. He denied information as to the character of the conversations, the nature of his appointment or what country he was going. There was a rumor that Mr. Crane might go to China. It was based on the fact that Minister Paul S. Reinsch is returning to this country from Peking. The reported amicable agreement reached by the president and his cabinet makes this unlikely.

It is more probable that Mr. Crane is to go to Russia. The recent report of the commercial treaty between the United States and Russia, carrying with it the cancellation of passport privileges, has been a vexatious subject.

CABINET APPROVES NOTE

Kaiser's Government to Be Held to Account for Death of American Citizens, Says Document—Explanation Asked.

Washington, May 12.—Germany has asked Ambassador Gerard at Berlin to notify the United States that submarine commanders have been specifically instructed not to harm neutral ships which are not engaged in hostile acts in the war zone, and that Germany will pay for damage sustained by such ships.

Washington, May 12.—President Wilson will enter a vigorous protest to Germany and will insist on an explanation of the series of incidents connected with the submarine war waged around British Isles which resulted in the deaths of American citizens.

The president after three days of study in solitude, came to this decision last night and submitted his draft to the members of the cabinet. It was unanimously approved.

This decision, reached by President Wilson tonight, marks the first step in the policy which will be pursued by the United States as a result of the sinking of the Lusitania and the loss of more than 100 American lives.

The Kaiser's government also will be asked to explain the sinking of the Paluba, causing the death of Leon C. Thrasher, an American; the torpedoing of the Guilford, and the attack by German airmen on the American steamship Cushing.

In firm and unmistakable terms, according to the document with the document, the president, after voicing the intense feeling of the United States over these happenings, demands, in the name of international law, that Germany adhere to the established rules of maritime warfare.

Demands Safety for Passengers. Unarmed merchant vessels, carrying non-combatants, must be visited and searched when encountered on the high seas, says the note, and passengers and crew be transferred to a place of safety before any prize is destroyed.

The document to be sent to Germany points out that the Germans will be held to strict accountability for any attacks on American vessels or deaths of American citizens. It is said the United States denies the right on the part of Germany to carry on such methods of warfare and states that the mere giving of official notice of intention to commit an unjustifiable act does not make it lawful.

The events which follow if Germany refuses to comply with the expressed wishes of the note, would not be discussed by members of the cabinet tonight.

COUNTRY CHILDREN TO LEARN TO PLAY

Milwaukee, May 18th. (Special.) Teaching the children in the rural schools to learn to play is the mission of Miss Maynard Downes of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association. She is on a tour of the County Training Schools, starting last week at New London, Miss Downes is visiting in turn Grand Rapids, Merrill, Antigo, Eau Claire, Rice Lake, Madison, Verona and Rock Springs.

Teaching the principles of health unconsciously through play is the primary object of the work that Miss Downes is doing. The work which she is introducing in the County Training Schools is unique as a part of rural program, it being an effort to extend to the country child some of the benefits of organized play which the child in the large city finds from the wisely supervised public playgrounds.

Demonstrations of various games which may be played with advantage to the health of the children in rural schools where playground equipment is not available, are given at each County Training School, the demonstration being with the aid of the community in which the session is held. Breathing exercises so arranged so they seem like play are also given. Another interesting line of work in which Miss Downes is seeking to gain the cooperation of the rural teachers is the health instruction work through the medium of story telling. Miss Downes was formerly a children's librarian at Chautauque headquarters and has written and arranged a number of stories which are entertaining and at the same time teach some vital health truths.

"Children need to be taught how to play," says Miss Downes. "Unless they are taught they generally spend their recess periods standing around waiting for the ball to ring. The best games for rural school work are the simplest and those which provide exercise for many children as possible at the same time. Three dozen is an especially good game because it keeps the children in almost constant activity, while games played with a basket ball are also splendid exercise besides being great fun. On the other hand, I do not care for ring games like 'drop the handkerchief' because they comparatively few children benefit. Teachers tell that it sometimes seems almost impossible to get the children to play, that is why I am so interested in finding new games for them. I believe that games and story-telling can be made invaluable in giving health instructions in the schools, and I have found that the country schools need both games and stories and eagerly do the children in the city."
